

Employees with a Communicable Disease

Including the Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV)-AR

If a principal, director, or other person in charge of a school knows or suspects that an employee has a communicable disease, s/he shall notify the health authority and the Superintendent/designee of the District.

Upon learning that an employee of the District has a communicable disease, including testing positive for HIV, the Superintendent/designee shall request a written certification from the employee's health care provider that the employee is not suffering from any "opportunistic" or "secondary" disease of a communicable nature which would, in and of itself, be a basis for excluding the employee from employment. The District may periodically require updated medical certifications of "fitness-for-duty" from the employee's health care provider, when it deems appropriate. [IT IS ADVISABLE TO CONSULT EMPLOYMENT LAW COUNSEL BEFORE REQUESTING ADDITIONAL CERTIFICATIONS.]

The District will not reduce the employee's sick leave accruals for time spent obtaining these medical certifications.

The District will, within five days of receipt of the certification or statement, return the employee to the employment position assigned to the employee for the current school year. However, if the certification or statement reveals that the employee is suffering from any "opportunistic" or "secondary" infection or disease which is transmittable to other persons in the course of ordinary employment contact in the employee's assignment, the District may refuse to assign the employee to that employment assignment and may take whatever administrative action is deemed appropriate within the District's policies or regulations, consistent with applicable law.

If, at any time, the District wishes more frequent examinations than those required by the employee's health care provider for the purposes identified in preceding paragraphs, the District will bear all expenses for such examinations and the employee will not have his/her sick leave time reduced for such additional examinations.

If, at any time, the medical certification submitted by the employee's health care provider reveals a communicable disease which poses a threat of transmission to persons through ordinary contact in the employment context, the District may exclude the employee from performing his/her normally assigned duties on the same basis that would apply to any other employee of the District.

When the medical certification submitted by the employee's health care provider indicates that the "opportunistic" or "secondary" disease is no longer contagious, the employee shall be returned to his/her normal employment assignment.
